Museums offer free admission

Military members and their families will gain free access to hundreds of museums throughout the nation this summer, thanks to a partnership between the National Endowment for the Arts and Blue Star Families.

More than 600 museums in 50 states and the District of Columbia have signed up to participate in Operation Appreciation: Blue Star Museums. The free admission program is available to any bearer of a Geneva Convention common access card, a DD Form 1173 ID card, or a DD Form 1173-1 ID card, which includes active-duty servicemembers, Reserve and National Guard members, and up to five immediate family members. This program is being offered between now and Sept. 6.

Eleven museums in Delaware are in the program. Visit <http://www.arts.gov/national/bluestarmuseums/index.php?st=DE#list> to see which ones are participating. (Courtesy American Forces Press Service)

IMA program to hire 1,600 by Sept

The Individual Mobilization Augmentee program is set to hire 1,600 Airmen by September in positions opening worldwide in all career fields.

Recent attrition rates and the rise of new positions have created a great need to grow the program. Unlike any other Air Force service member, IMAs have flexibility when they work and where.

"We're hiring and that is terrific news on several fronts," said Col. Nancy Zbyszinski, commander, Readiness Management Group. The RMG oversees the Air Force's 8,700 IMAs and 1,500 Participating Individual Ready Reservists. "The IMA program offers a unique opportunity to serve in Reserve status for those who are not located near a traditional Guard or Reserve unit, for anyone who cannot commit to one weekend every month, or for anyone who wants to participate in new Air Force missions."

Designed under one of several Reserve categories, IMAs do not serve in Reserve organizations, but instead are assigned to active component units - either Air Force or joint. Rather than serving one weekend a month and two weeks a year, IMAs have flexibility in scheduling their annual training requirements. (Courtesy Air Force Reserve Command)
